Writing Made Easy,

ON systematical principles by which a neat and expeditious hand is acquired in a few hours.

Mr. BABE (from Europe) pupil of Mr Jones, original teacher of the new style of writing which has been so much admired in the polite circles, announces his arrival in Pittsburgh, and respectfully solicits the patronage of its inhabitants for a few weeks—in writing only.

His methods are peculiarly calculated to remove the stiffness and formality of school instruction and to give that finish so desirable in writing—His instructions are applicable to all persons between the ages of 14 and 70 years, and in 10 lessons only of one hour each, he reforms the most imperfect characters into neatness, correctness and expedition. Men in business who write imperfectly will do well to call on Mr. Babe, at Mr. Samuel Bryson's, Grant street. Ladies will be attended to at their dwellings. Terms moderate.

POLITICAL REVIEW.

[We are happy in being able to spare a column in this day's paper, to the exhibition of the admirably drawn portraits of the New-England Galaxy.]

TRAITS OF POLITICAL CHARACTERS.

"Let us turn our eyes to the District of Maine and see who represented those rebellious spirits. This portion of our state I think sent two delegates only. One a young man of amiable disposition, and considerably distinguished for his literary and professional acquirements, and great integrity of character, but who had no particle of the elements of a revolutionist in his composition. The other delegate from Maine was a man of middle age, a prominent and decided character, much engaged in literary and professional pursuits, who had an independent political creed, but was not very bustling or active, but who, when roused, might have said to the oppressors of Maine, (no part of New-England suffered so much as this did by the war)

> "I pray thee take thy fingers from my throat,
> For, thongh I am not splentive nor rash,
> Yet, I have in me something dangerous:
> Which let thy wisdom fear."

"This man has grown with the growth, and strengthened with the strength of Maine; and had all that intrepidity and independence produced in high minded men by living in a new country, sharing in its difficulties, making up much of its honors in himself, and feeling intensely in its destinies. It is a true remark that in every civil commotion, in every period of extreme danger, people of all ranks constantly gather round genius and ability, without envy or distrust; and look with instinctive reliance on those who are able to lead & save. Had opposition been made to the General Government, he must have been conspicuously and dangerously situated. But there was no danger from this man; he saw and felt how much his friends and neighbors suffered; but he was among the most quiet in the Convention; for his views of policy were enlarged and liberal; and he saw that the present evils were not to be cured by violence or bloodshed. [illegible] wise man. he could not but see that the restrictive system and all its train of evils had thrown back the progress of civilization in his part of the country more than half a century; but he likewise knew that patience was alone necessary; that the sufferings of the community must for a season be endured until the time for the healing of the nation arrived."

"The reputation of many of the other gentlemen who composed the Convention was deservedly high, and the confidence of the people who knew them personally, was as well founded as in those I have named. But this every one understood, that all might follow as far as the conventionists in their wisdom would venture to lead. The delegates from Rhode Island were represented to us as men of talents and probity; and Connecticut, you know, is always sagely represented. The two from New-Hampshire were well known for respectability and talents. One of them, Benjamin West, has since deceased. He was a warm hearted patriotic citizen; an old man, who loved his country, her institutions and her altars; who knew the price they cost and their value to posterity; who wished for nothing but his country's honor and happiness, and feared nothing but to offend his God. Peace be to his ashes—he is beyond the reach of slander, enmity or praise."

"The rage for emigrating to the western country has injured New-England considerably; but that, like all other fashions, will soon grow out of date. Eternal verdure, perpetual sunshine, and undiminished plenty, so often boasted of in your clime, are found to be "of such stuff as dreams are made of." Men are poor and suffer, die, and worms eat them, beyond the Allegheny as well as on the shores of the Atlantic ocean. We are turning our attention to agriculture and manufactures more of late than formerly, which is laying a more permanent foundation for prosperity than we have ever yet had: but neither time, accident, nor circumstance can ever prevent us from being a commercial people; our "home is on the deep." The time is fast coming when justice will be done to our character, "even beyond the mountains." The principles, a little softened by experience, which the statesmen of New England first adopted, are, in almost every thing, becoming the standard doctrines of the national government. Forts, armies, and navies, sounds once so dreadful to southern and western ears, are now considered as essential for our country's defence and dignity.

One word on the subject of our merchants. You do not know them; they have peculiarities as well as other men, but act from as patriotic motives. At a more convenient season I will cheerfully combat your wild and erroneous opinions, and think I shall be able to shew you that, Edmund Burke notwithstanding, they are even in England as patriotic, at least, as many statesmen.

To your observations on the congressional representation on the sea board, (pardon me, for you are not a little acrimonious) I can hardly with coolness reply, but believe from your own letters, I can draw some splendid arguments to assist me in answering you. Do you recognize these observations and opinions as your own—"I heard Quincey yesterday; he was long and elaborate; he is a rigid and austere politician but I respect his abilities, and have no doubt of his honesty." And at another time, "Lloyd's fame is incorporated with that of our navy;" true it is, for the visions of glory which spared not his aching sight have become realities; and his prophecies on our naval prowess and glory have been fulfilled in the age in which they were uttered. This happiness was not deferred for unborn ages to enjoy. A few years have proved that his predictions were inspired. In praise of Webster you lost the asperity, of your politics, and your dislike to New-England was forgotten. On this orator you say (I quote from memory) "I heard him (Mr. W.) this day on the question of the national bank; his arguments were clear and invincible. I forgot his politics in admiration of his abilities. I felt that he soared at a sightless distance above party, and my heart swelled with pride in feeling that I was a citizen of the same country that gave him birth." Mr. Ward, the last representative from Suffolk, is a good and sound lawyer and discriminating statesman, but I trust, had not much to do in forming and wording the slovenly bills we have had for years past from Congress. One of these men, whom even you extol, is a highminded and honorable merchant, who would be as delicate and scrupulous in point of honor, as punctual about the days of grace upon a bill of Exchange. Others you might have named as men of sense, and who understood their duty, and never hesitated to discharge it in that body or any other. The people of Kentucky think it a matter of prime importance to get into Congress. Our New Englanders are driven to it. I mean those of learning and genius. An ambitious boy, or vain old man may wish to get into Congress, and feel pleased with an election; but the master spirits are obliged to stay at home or neglect their business in going to Congress, and accordiug to your idea of us, we are prone to place the substantiality of profits above the moonshine of fame.

ECONOMY IN DEVOTION.

FROM THE EDINBURGH REVIEW NO. LVI

Article: Travels in Caucasus and Georgia.

"Prayer is one of the principal duties enjoined by Lamaism; and the Calmucks discharge this duty in the most exemplary manner, and with very little trouble to themselves.

"It is well known that a Romish priest must say his breviary five times a day.—Among other stories which are told of Jesuitical casuistry, it is said that the sons of St. Ignatius invented a convenient method of complying with the injunctions of the church.—At the canonical hour, the Jesuit repeats the Alphabet from A to Z, to which he adds a short collect, in which he begs that the Christ-cross row may be taken as an equivalent for all the prayers which can be made out of the combination and repetition of the letters. The Calmucks have displayed still greater ingenuity. We Europeans pride ourselves upon the superiority which we have attained, by substituting machinery for human labour. We think we have accomplished miracles by employing the "strong arm" of "unconquered steam" in twirling the spindle, or in setting the wool-card in motion. The followers of the Grand Lama have done more—they have invented praying-jennies, which do the business in perfection. It is a doctrine amongst them, (and it is so convenient to saints and sinners, that no Calmuck, whether free-thinker or devotee, has ever ventured to call it in question;) that as often as the paper, or other substance upon which a prayer is written, is set in motion, this movement of the written prayer is as meritorious as its oral repetition.

The Kurada or praying machine, is therefore constructed upon this principle;—it consists of two cylenders, or drums filled within-side, with rolls of paper covered with prayers and ejaculations, written in the Tangotian or sacred language. The drums are hung in a neat frame, and are kept in a whirl with great facility, by the simple contrivance of a string and crank; and every turn of the cylinder is perfectly equivalent to the representation of all the prayers contained in it. The turning of the Kurada is an agreeable pastime in the long evenings of winter; but Tartar ingenuity has discovered a method of dispensing even with the slight degree of exertion which this compendious substitute requires. We make the "swift trochais" roast our meat—they employ the smoke jack to say their prayers for them;—and the Kurada which spins over the fire in the midst of the hut, transfers all its devotional merit to the owner. The Mongols are yet more wisely economical of individual responsibility and labour. Amongst them the inhabitants of a district construct a Kurada at their joint expence, which is placed in a mill-house by the side of a running stream; and this subscription Kurada is made so large, that it holds prayers enough to serve for all the parish; and, consequently, except in seasons of uncommon drought, when the water is too low to turn the mill which grinds prayers for the parishioners, they are completely exonorated from the obligation of wasting their time in the Cherule or temple.

The Kimorin is another dumb substitute for devotion, of the same nature. It is a flag, upon which the air horse, or Kimorin is painted, together with an appropriate section from the Calmuck ritual. Such were the consecrated ensigns seen by Dr. Clarke. As long as the Kimorin flutters in the wind, the inhabitants of the tent upon which it is hoisted, are making their way to heaven by help of the air horse."

Benevolent Societies in Italy.—A society of gentlemen called the Buonuomini di San Martino, has been four hundred years collecting and distributing alms among the poor who are ashamed to beg. The rank of these philanthropists, and their objects of relief, induce the rich to contribute, and sometimes to bequeath very considerable supplies. All bequests are turned directly into cash; nothing is funded; nothing belongs to the society, except the oratory where they meet. The receipts of every year are distributed within the year, to bundreds who are starving under genteel appearance: decayed gentlemen whose rank deters others from offering relief; ladies who live in garrets, and, ashamed of their poverty, steal down to mass before daylight; industrious women whom the failure of the silk manufacture has left without any resource:—such are the objects whom these Buonuomini go weekly, privately, to visit and relieve. They were a kind of benevolent spies upon the domestic miseries of Florence, and used to search for the retreats of suffering delicacy.

The Misericordia is an institution diffused over Tuscany. At Florence it consists of 400 men, chosen promiscuously from every rank. These philanthropists volunteer their service to the sick, the hurt, and the dead. On the toll of a bell they repair to their chapel, where they conceal themselves in long black vestments, which mask the whole head, and then set out with a covered litter, to convey the patients to the hospital of Santa Maria Nuova. There you will find the first noblemen in Florence, with their aprons and ladles, following the soup, which is wheeled along the wards, and dealing it out to the sick, as a check on the administration of the hospital. In the same lugubrious garb they convey, in the evening, the corpses of the day to St. Catharine's church, where all the dead are collected for the midnight cart, and sent to the common burying-ground at Trespiano. This benevolent society has never paused for the last 500 years, nor desisted from its fatal duties during several plagues."

The interesting account above is from a recent publication by Joseph Forsyth, Esq. entitled Remarks on Antiquities, Arts, and Letters, during an excursion in Italy in the years 1801 and 1803.

POLITICAL INDEPENDENCE.

The late Governor Sullivan of Massachusetts, was distinguished no less for his talents and his gentlemanlike deportment, than for his sterling independence in the administration of his official duties. He was elected Governor of Massachusetts at a time of great political excitement, when it was expected by the office-hunting gentry, that he would adopt all their prejudices and plans, and merge the character of the Chief Magistrate in that of the partisan.—The following anecdote, recently published in the Portland Gazette, affords an instance of his independence of mind, which deserves to be imitated by rulers to whatever party they may belong:—

[R. I. American.

A certain would be great man undertook to wait upon his Excellency, and prevail upon him both by "logick" and threats, to pursue a different line of conduct. "You were elected," said he, "by my influence and exertions, and it is in my power to frustrate your re-election." The reply of Mr. Sullivan was highly honorable to his character, as well as expressive of his firmness and independence of mind. "I am the Governor of the Commonwealth, and not of a party. In pursuing the welfare of the former, I regard not the threats of the latter. At all times, Sir, I shall be happy to see you at my house in the character of Mr. ——, but never in that of a dictator. At present you will please to take your leave."

It is almost superfluous to add that Governour Sullivan became unpopular with the democratic party, previous to his death, and it has been generally supposed that they would have opposed his re-election.

Zerah Colburn.—The memoirs of Zerah Colburn are now publishing in England, and subscriptions are about to be circulated for the work in this country. It is the work of J. B. Moore, Esq. "The work will contain a minute detail of the child from his birth; the first discovery of his amazing powers; with some of his most intricate questions;—a table of his method of extracting the square and cube roots, and determining the difference of those roots; likewise a full explanation of his method of ascertaining prime numbers, and if not a prime number, of obtaining all the factors of which that number is composed; a method (his own invention) which he explained on the night of the 13th December 1813."

He is now at Westminster school, under the patronage of the Earl of Bristol, where he makes wonderful progress in language and the mathematics.—N. Y. Columbian.

DIED, in England, Admiral Bluterford; one of the Lords of the Admiralty. He had in possession the famous diamond ring belonging to the unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots;—the engraving on which was produced on her trial as evidence that she aspired to the English crown.—After a variety of travels it descended to admiral B's family: and is now said to have been purchased by the Prince Regent of England.

OPPOSITES.

A good wife should be like three things; which three things she should not be like.

First—She should be like a Snail to keep within her own house; but she should not be like a Snail to carry all she has upon her back.

Secondly—She should be like an Echo, to speak when spoken to; but she should not be like an Echo always to have the last word.

Thirdly—She should be like a town Clock, always to keep time and regularity; but she should not be like a town Clock, to speak so loud that all the town may hear her.

RESPECTFULLY inform the public, that they have removed their

Seminary for Young Ladies,

to that large and commodious house, the property of Col. O'Hara, on Scotch-hill, corner of 2 and Grant street. The superior accommodation afforded by their present dwelling, will enable them to receive some addition to their number of pupils; and the list of accomplishments which they formerly taught, has received an important accession, in the assistance of a lady and gentleman who are well qualified to give instruction on the Harp and Guitar, and in drawing and painting.

They flatter themselves that by this combination of talent, joined to their long experience in the duties of instruction, the young ladies of the Western country will find in this SEMINARY every advantage possessed by the best similar establishments on the continent.

They cannot conclude on this occasion, without renewing to their patrons, their most sincere and lively acknowledgements, for the constant support they have received during the last three yeas, and they pledge themselves that no efforts on their part shall be wanting to merit a continuance

Pittsburgh, Nov. 11th, 1817.——3t

PITTSBURGH.

TUESDAY DECEMBER 9, 1817.

The Governor of Georgia issued an order on the 14th ult. requiring one thousand of the militia of that State to rendezvous at Fort Hawkins on the 10th of this month—there to be organized, to join the United States forces under Gen. Gaines, destined against the hostile Indians.

GERMAN BANK OF WOOSTER.—A letter from the cashier of this institution to the Post master in this city, dated Nov. 9th, says "The reports in circulation tending to injure the credit of the bank, are entirely false. This institution has never refused to redeem its notes with specie since the 20th of April last."

It is stated in the Nashville Whig of November 1, that the Legislature of Tennessee, now in session, appears decidedly against the establishment of a branch of the National Bank in that state.

From respectable information, (says the Lancaster Journal) we are induced to believe that the Governor's election will be contested at Harrisburgh.

It will be recollected by our readers, that Mr. Peacock appealed from the decision of the arbitrators in the case of Kline against him. It is stated in the Lancaster Gazette, of 26th ult. that Mr. Peacock has recently withdrawn his appeal and paid the costs, amounting to between two and three hundred dollars!

LIVING MAMMOTHS.

The Emigrant, a newspaper printed at St. Louis Missouri Territory, of the 4th ult. contains the following paragraph.

"It is said that living Mammoths have lately been seen near the Rocky Mountains." We hope the editor will be more communicative, and inform us upon what authority it is 'said'—and whether it is believed.

It is stated in the same paper, that one hundred dwelling houses have been erected in St. Louis this season. The arrival of Earl Selkirk of the Hudson's Bay Fur Company, at St. Louis, is also mentioned. He intends to pass through the Atlantic states on his return to Canada.

Russian Ambassador.—A London paper of the 8th of October, under the Berlin date of September 30th, states, that General Count Van Tuyl, Ambassador from the Emperor of Russia to the United States of North America, had passed through Berlin from St. Petersburgh, on his way to Philadelphia.

From the Baltimore Patriot, Nov. 27.

SOUTH AMERICAN MISSION.

Messrs. Rodney, Graham, and Bland, Commissioners to South America, with Mr. Brackenridge, secretary to the mission, left this city this morning in the steam boat Virginia, for Norfolk, where they will embark on board the Congress frigate, Capt. Sinclair, and proceed immediately to perform the duties of their appointment.

The Sea Serpent it is said, is still in Long Island Sound. On Friday and Saturday last, he was seen off Greenwich harbor, in the vicinity of Captain's Island, by a number of the inhabitants of that town. He moved slowly through the water with his head raised about six feet; and in his progress, produced a foam like that produced by the bow of a vessel. He appeared to be amusing himself liesurely near & round the Islands, and occupied about ten minutes in passing from one of the Island to the other, a distance of little more than a mile. [N. Y. Spec. Nov. 28.

DISGRACEFUL.

An ordinance has been passed by the city of Savannah, (Georgia) by which any person that teaches a person of colour, either a slave or free, to read or write, or causes such person to be so taught, is subjected to a fine of thirty dollars for each offence; and every person of colour who shall keep a school to teach reading or writing, is subject to a fine of thirty dollars or be imprisoned ten days and whipped 39 lashes. Although it may be for the interest of slaveholders to keep the unfortunate wretches in as much ignorance as possible, generally, yet we consider the adoption of such a law as the above, as revolting to the best feelings of the heart, and a stigma to the city which has enacted it. Prov. Gaz.

The marine of Algiers, has revived. amidst all the calamities they have experienced, during the last two years. It now consists of a frigate of 44, 5 corvettes of 18 and 24 guns; and five brigs and schrs. of same force, and all remarkably fine sailers. The smaller vessels were ordered on a cruise in the British channel, and have succeeded in capturing three Spanish, one Dutch, and one Russian vessels. The latter was restored.

Just as our paper was going to press, we were informed of the loss of the Steam Boat LEXINGTON, near Natchez;—four persons drowned; none of the cargo saved. This accident happened during the night when the passengers were in bed, and was caused by the vessel running on a snag

Lexington Rep.

Calcutta papers to July last, have been received in Salem. They still speak of the savage depredations of the Pindaries from the mountains; who are represented as bearing off infant children on their pikes; and have reduced the town of Ganjam to ashes.

William Cobbett talks of going to England shortly, to run for a seat in Parliament; but proposes previous to his departure, to collect and publish, in a cheap form, the life and writings of the late Thomas Paine!

Scarcely less benevolent is Dr. Ewell of Washington city, who has in the press an edition of the Deistical Essays of that celebrated infidel, David Hume, accompanied however, as an antidote to their effects upon religion, by an abstract of a Defence of Christianity. It has been said that "an ounce of prevention is worth a ponnd of cure," but the Doctor is for giving a pound of poison accompanied by a scruple of antidote. Greensburgh Gaz.

By a late census of the Island of Bombay, it appears, there are 403,786 Hindoos, 27,811 Mahometanf, 13,135 Parsees, 11, 454 native Christians, 781 Jews. The houses are 20,786. This estimate is exclusive of temporary sojourners, European and native troops, or British subjects. From 60 to 70,000 persons visit the Island periodically.

A letter from N. Orleans, Oct. 25, received in Boston, says,—"While we congratulate ourselves on the return of health in our city, we cannot but sympathize with the citizens of some of the interior towns, who are suffering from the ravages of the fever. The weather here has been as warm for a week past, as we generally have it in June—the strongest constitution cannot but give way under this long continuance of hot weather."

From the National Intelligencer.

The Mobile Gazette, of the 8th of October, (the last received) states that information had reached that place, that the Seminole Indians, to the number of five thousand were in arms.

There is no doubt of the hostile feeling of this tribe of Indians; but much later accounts from the Georgia frontier do not corroborate the Mobile statement of their strength, and there is reason to hope that the movement of General Gaines into the Indian country will have the effect of preventing a war with those deluded beings; but if not, his force will enable him in a short time to reduce them to submission.

Sackett's Harbor, Nov. 11.—We are sorry to learn, that owing to the late severe rains, and the interruption of the work thereby, under the Engineer who was building a sea-wall for its security, that half the rear of the ancient stone building called the Mess-House at Fort Niagara, has fallen down, and it is feared the whole edifice will follow. It was erected by the French, probably one hundred years since, and was capable of containing a complete regiment.

Accident.—On Sunday evening, as the Rev. Mr. Frey.. commonly called the converted jew, was preaching to a crowded auditory in a new building of Mr. John Harmer, in Brooklyn, the cracking of timbers, announced the floor was giving way; and in a moment about 60 or 70 persons were precipitated into the cellar, with the broken boards and timber. A scene of terrible confusion ensued, as many supposed the whole building was falling. Many persons were severely bruized, but we have not learned that any bones were broken. N. Y. Col.

From the Democratic Press.

Georgia Sugar.—Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Georgia, to a member of congress.

"The cultivation of the cane is rapidly extended with us. I have received some information on this interesting subject, which, I suppose, may be gratifying to you.

"Major Butler, on 35 acres, cultivated by 74 hands, produced 140,000 lbs. sugar, and 17 hogsheads molasses.

"John M'Queen Esq. planted 18 acres in cane average, product 20000 canes per acre —5000 canes, the product of a quarter of an acre, yielded 600 gallons of juice, which, boiled down, made 672 lbs. sugar, and may lose 50 pounds in draining, leaving 662 pounds or 2488 pounds of sugar per acre."

Let us look at these products, and see what they amount to, at the present prices for sugar and molasses.

140,000 pound sugar, (worth on the spot) 17 cents,	$23,800
75 hhds. molasses, at $80.	6,900
Product of 85 acres & 17 hands.	$30,700
18 acres, at 2488 pounds per acre, 44,781 lbs. at 17 cents,	$7612 77
Say 23 hhds. molasses, at $80,	1840
Produce of 18 acres, & 5 or 6 hands,	$9452 77

49, 252 dollars the product of 23 hands, are, for each hand, 1706 dollars. There is no gold mine equal to this.

But sugar and molasses may not hold their present prices; the duties will be reduced and the cost of freight and charges lessened, by the continuance of peace. Good sugar, however cannot easily be lower in the United States than 10 cents, the (old) duty included, and it is believed the West India Planter cannot profitably furnish it here at so low a rate. And in the product of these crops, raised on 103 acres, by 23 hands (allowing the sugar at ten cents per pound, and the molasses at 4 dollars per hogshead,) would be 21,978 dollars, or 212 dollars per acre, and 961 per hand.

When we get to exporting sugar—when it becomes a staple article of our commerce like cotton, its value may depreciate equal to the duty, that will probably be continued upon it (2 1-2 cents per pound,) but still it will be a most profitable crop.

Thus do the bounties of God to our country unfold themselves, and point to indedependence.

From the New-York Gazette, Nov. 23.

Yesterday morning, at half past three o'clock, the Elephant was landed from on board the ship Trident, at Old slip. Previous to her descending the stage which had been erected for her passage to the wharf, she exhibited a pleasing proof of sagacity, by trying the strength of it with one of her fore feet five times before she ventured to descend.

Cobbett begins to talk of going home.—His present opinion is that he shall go in about a year; but if a general election should take place he may go sooner; and if the electors of any city or town would make him the offer of a seat in parliament he would go immediately. He says "I shall in a short time offer myself in distinct terms to the people of a city in the middle of England, to whom I am in some degree pledged." "Conscious as I feel of my power to serve my country in the capacity of member of parliament, it is my duty to offer myself, and to state specifically what I will do if placed in that capacity."
